

calibration mixture (in analysis)

A gaseous or liquid mixture of known composition, generally comprising one or more calibration components and an inert diluent, used directly for testing and calibration of analytical instruments.

1990, 62, 2178