

carbon cenospheres

Porous or hollow carbonaceous sphere-like particles (frequently in the size range of a few to several hundreds of μm diameter) formed during pyrolysis, also in the course of combustion, of carbonaceous liquid droplets (e.g. heavy fuel) or solid particles (e.g. coal).

1995, 67, 480