

collisional excitation (in mass spectrometry)

An ion/neutral species process wherein there is an increase in the reactant ion's internal energy at the expense of the translational energy of either (or both) of the reacting species. The scattering angle may be large.

1991, 63, 1555