

Dobson unit (in atmospheric chemistry)

Unit sometimes used in the description of the total ozone in a column of air overhead. It is given as the thickness (in units of 10^{-3} cm or 10^{-5} m) of that layer which would be formed by the total ozone in a column reduced to the pressure of 760 Torr and temperature of 0 °C.

1990, 62, 2185