

kinetic control (of product composition)

The term characterizes conditions (including reaction times) that lead to reaction products in a proportion governed by the relative rates of the parallel (forward) reactions in which the products are formed, rather than by the respective overall equilibrium constants.

See also thermodynamic control.

1994, 66, 1133