

programmed-temperature chromatography (temperature programming)

A procedure in which the temperature of the column is changed systematically during a part or the whole of the separation.

1993, 65, 827